Read the passage below and answer questions 15 to 19.

Mr Robinson was a retired truck driver. Nine years ago, he was involved in a road accident when his truck struck an icy bridge. He was hospitalised with severe head injuries. Gradually he went blind and deaf. He had to learn Braille, a system of writing for the blind that uses characters made up of raised dots. He also had to wear a hearing aid.

Then one fateful day, he was in the garden looking for his pet during a thunderstorm. He wanted his chicken to be safe. Unfortunately, a bolt of lightning struck him unconscious while he was looking for Chickie. When Mr Robinson came to, he found that he could see and hear a little! To his doctor’s surprise, his sight and hearing had returned. It was a strange phenomenon which was unexplainable.

“I’m so happy!” Mr Robinson said. “What I would like most is to see my two grandchildren. They were born after I became blind. I would also like to see my pet chicken and the flowers I grew in the garden plot.”

Mrs Robinson exclaimed, “I’m very excited. I’ve lost my voice just talking about this wonderful cure.”

A month later, Mr Robinson said that his scalp felt strange - as if he had whiskers on his head. The family doctor examined his bald head with a magnifying glass and announced, “You’re getting your hair back!”

Since then, Mr Robinson had become famous. He was interviewed several times on radio and television. He also received hundreds of telephone calls and letters. One Hollywood producer even planned to make a film of his wonderful cure.

Comprehension (Open-ended) (10 marks)

Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Bala ran to his study table when he awoke. There, in an empty jam bottle, was his colourful little butterfly. It had been difficult to catch it as it kept flying away from his grasp. Finally, he had succeeded and without a net too.

The biology project required Bala to submit the study of a living creature every month. Most of his classmates drew diagrams from their books. Bala wanted to do something different. Bala had made a few holes on the cap of the bottle to let air pass through. Although he had trapped the creature, he cared for it.

At the thought of displaying his exhibit to his biology teacher, Bala felt his heart beat faster as he made his way to school. When he reached school, he saw a few boys playing football in the field. Any other day would have seen Bala joining them without a second thought but not that day. He walked straight into his class, opened the window and placed the bottle on the windowsill. The biology class that day had been the most interesting in a long time.

As Bala was making his way home, he remembered his mother’s advice to release the butterfly once his Science project was over. She said that butterflies do not survive very long in captivity. Bala opened the lid of the bottle and started shaking it gently. The butterfly started to move slowly, as if it was waking from a deep slumber. It perched itself on the edge of the bottle and flapped its colourful wings. It waited there for a long time. Bala also waited.

All of a sudden, it began to flutter its wings. To Bala, the tiny noise of the fluttering wings was music to his ears. After it had flown off, he sat staring at the empty bottle for a while, feeling a little empty himself. Bala knew that he had done the right thing.
